The Hughes Gargoyle, as the student voice, plays a role of great importance to our school.

The Gargoyle competently fills two important responsibilities—one to its staff members; the other to its readers.

Students who unselfishly give their time and talents to make our Gargoyle a prize-winning newspaper, receive two valuable rewards. First of all, the newspaper presents an outlet and offers encouragement for high school journalistic efforts and talents.

Secondly, the students who diligently participate in high school journalism, prepare a way for future happiness and success.

To its readers, the Gargoyle offers factual and interesting accounts of school activities, and, even more important, provides a medium for encouragement of important school spirit and good citizenship.

Miss Hazel L. Koppenhoefer, staff adviser, not only capably fills her position of responsibility with initiative and dignity, but gives to every staff member constructive help and advice, so vital to a successful newspaper and happy future.

According to set Gargoyle traditions, anyone interested may join the staff. Positions of leadership are determined on the basis of merit, although most editors are juniors or members of the journalism class.

Editors hold the positions for a period of one year. As seniors, in the position of senior advisers, they aid new staff members and offer constructive criticism and advice.

The ultimate goal of every staff member is to do his individual part to produce a newspaper that will live up to the high traditions and standards of Hughes.
