Among the tools of good teaching found at Hughes are the planned use of motion pictures and the thousands of textbooks distributed each year. Student projectionists are available to all teachers in all subjects, and also available for the weekly extended homeroom period. The counting, distributing and recording of all textbooks in use are handled by outstanding students who devote many hours of their own time to this job. Each year the teachers find textbooks for their classes already counted and ready to be picked up, and periodically, throughout each week of the school year, the bookroom is open for the benefit of the faculty. All bookroom business is under the direction of Miss Mary Boland, Head Librarian.
