Business and Merchandising

Petty Wesley shows Jody Tabar a coat

Courses in Business and Merchandising take advantage of the many opportunities open to high school graduates in the stores and offices of Cincinnati. Students are offered the services of business concerns in the city, and many merchandising students work for these concerns after school hours. Others choose courses from a full program which includes Typing, Shorthand, Secretarial Practice, Office Practice, General Business and Salesmanship. Familiarity with office machines is stressed, and many students are launched on promising careers in the business world through the knowledge they obtain while still in high school.
