

Since 1870, when the first Hughes Annual was published, there has been a group of ambitious workers who strove to make the yearbook a success. Originally, the Annual was a record of the senior activities; today it is a record of activities for the entire school.

The hard hours of work given to this book by the staff have paid great dividends, the biggest being able to look at and see something they themselves had written, put to print, and so widely distributed.

Beginning back last June, the editors and advisors began their work. A theme was selected, and these four traveled to Nashville, Tennessee, where the book was planned page-by-page. In September, the final staff was organized, and work began. Three divisions, namely, the literary, art, and business staffs, became a closely co-ordinated group all working for the final goal—this annual. Patience and co-operation, combined with hours of toil, mixed with humor and embarrassment, all go into making a good book.

This book is our dedication to you, the reader, for the school year 1956-57, so that you may pleasantly reminisce of this exciting and memorable year.
