

Darlene Burkhardt and Sylvia Bruns gain store experience in merchandising.

Hughestown Trains for the Business World

As the business world grows, the need for competent office workers increases. To help fill this need, Hughestown, U. S. A., sends out citizens who have studied typing, shorthand, office practice, secretarial practice, and bookkeeping.

To gain experience in performing office duties, students may join the Production Staff. They have the opportunity to run the mimeograph machines and to type and file cards for the various offices.

Mr. Charles Geraci stops to explain a method to Darlene Duebel.

For those students interested in buying and selling, Hughes has a special course in merchandising. The girls who take this course attend school two full days a week. The other three days they attend school for half a day and work in various downtown department stores the rest of the day and on Saturdays.
