

The three years spent by Hughestown citizens in the senior high are the most important in their school careers. Here the students put to use the knowledge acquired during their previous school years. Here they experiment for themselves, instead of just reading science from a textbook; they read the full-length works of the immortals, rather than the simplified versions; they derive for themselves the theories of the great mathematicians, instead of accepting them unquestionably. Climaxed by graduation, these three years prepare the students for their life as adults.
