Mr. Sutton Sets Sights High

As we pause on the threshold of the sparkling sixties, we see jets and satellites as one of the facets upon which the attention of the world is centered. This space age would not be possible without learning. Fortunately, learning can be acquired by each of us regardless of race or creed.

We trust each of our students has had, in so far as is possible, a full measure of rich experiences in curricular and extracurricular activities. We hope that his learning has been more meaningful and that his future will be more promising because of his having taken advantage of the educational opportunities at Hughes High School.
