

Let's see. Cincinnati must be somewhere around here.

We Study History in '60 But We Forge the Future

The Social Studies Department at Hughes gives the students an understanding and appreciation of our democratic government and its leaders. Good citizenship and the practical application of social studies in solving problems is stressed. Students preparing for college are given a good background in economics, sociology and history.

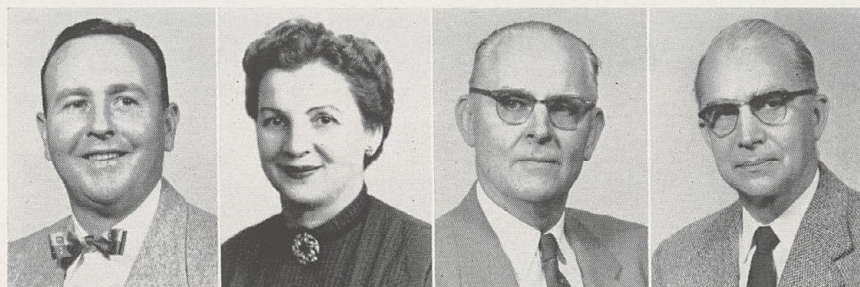

The curriculum includes geography, history, and civics for junior high students. Senior high subjects are world history, world geography, American history, American government, American problems, and economics and sociology.

Interest in current events and foreign affairs is stimulated in the Fireside College and the Junior Council on World Affairs. The Fireside College, a current events club, is sponsored by Mrs. Lenore Follinger. The Junior Council on World Affairs, under the sponsorship of Mr. Gray, helps to develop in students a desire to understand the happenings of the world.

Mr. Arthur Gray heads the social studies department. He is well-qualified for this position, with a B.A. degree from Indiana State Teachers College and a Master's Degree from the University of Chicago. Mr. Gray has taught at Hughes for the last twelve years.

A clear knowledge of history, geography, and government is necessary if nations are to live in peace during the Sparkling Sixties.

Melville Byles
Lenore Follinger
Arthur Gray
Lyle Grooms

Joseph J. Heink
Jessie Hollweck
Ethel Johnstone
Barbara H. Leeper

Mary Lincoln
Joseph L. Prior
Martha S. Bauer
Jean R. Suffridge

