Togati Organized Like Ancient Roman Republic

"Friends, Romans and countrymen, lend me your ears." Students of the ancient, not-at-all-dead language, "Latin," organized a Latin Club under the sponsorship of Miss Leola Reynolds.

The Togati club met for the first time on October 24, 1962, in room 222. Triton's sea shell was used to call the members of the club together and officers were elected: Joyce Beckman, as consul (president); John Magyar, as pro-consul (vice-president); Scharlyn Clark, as censor (secretary); Clarence Graves, quaestor (treasurer); and Floyd Mahan, as aedile; along with Lenore Hammons and Alice Brand as program committee members.

To celebrate Latin Week, all the students of Latin classes wore togas (for boys) or stolas (for girls) on March 13. After school, a party was held. Plays entitled "Bulla" and "Coriolanus" were presented.

Spanish Club Finds New Sponsor

The Spanish Club met with several changes this year at Hughes. One was the arrival of Miss Judith Davis, a new addition to the Hughes faculty, who supervises the meetings of the group.

At the first meeting, the club received a new name, "Tertulia," which means "social gathering."

Christmas time found the Spaniards singing for the other language clubs. For an encore, a skit was performed and narrated in Spanish. After the skit, the students returned to Room 221 for punch, cookies, cake, and jokes in Spanish.

As a final fling for the 1963 school year, the Spanish Club joined the French Club for a picnic at Winton Woods. The two clubs joined forces for an international game of baseball. After every one was thoroughly exhausted, refreshments were served.
