Dramatists Show Ability

A girl who never said no??? Her name was Bernadine. She lived in Sneaky Falls, Idaho. She was the subject of the Hughes High School play performed by the Thespian Society. The entire play was centered around a group of boys searching for the perfect woman. When they finally found her, they realized that she wasn't really the girl of their dreams. It seemed that the sweet little girl next door was really the perfect woman.

The big bad wolf, played by Ron Garrett, attempts to seduce the little girl next door, Pat Cunagin, in the stage production of Bernadine.

Besides this main play, Thespians presented a skit to promote voting for the School Bond Issues in November. The Hughes troupe of players put the skit on in October of 1962 for Parent-Teacher Organizations throughout Cincinnati.

The dramatics department also staged a show for a woman's club. The program consisted of songs and skits.

Contests for dramatics students were held throughout the nation in the spring. Each troupe presented a one-act play.

One of the major dramatic endeavors at Hughes this year was the production of "Merry-Go-Round". The dramatic students tried out for important roles. The casting was open to the entire school but experience and quality landed most of the parts for the hard-working drama students.
