

Globes can be an important asset to any history class. Mr. Heink points out the site of the Crimean War to Richard Kuhlman and Mike Dellacave.

Thomas Moore

Joseph Prior
Junior Student Council

Esther Schwach

Jean Suffridge

Carl Wilkey
Junior Dramatics Club

Maps and globes are only two aids for students of social studies. Movies, slides, current events magazines, posters, and written reports also supplement the courses.

Social studies in the seventh and eighth grades and American history in the eleventh grade are mandatory. However, in the ninth, tenth, and twelfth grades there is a wide variety of elective courses.

Civics, world and regional geography, American, modern and world history, and socio-economic problems are available to senior high students. Regional geography and socio-economic problems are being taught for the first time. Socio-economic problems is a combination of sociology, economics, and American problems; regional geography deals with the geography of Ohio and nearby states.