About the liveliest department at Hughes is the foreign language department.

Many supplementary activities stimulate interest in the study of the language, the reading of the literature, and the acquisition of knowledge about customs and traditions of the country.

In beautifully decorated classrooms Spanish classes find the right atmosphere for studying about the language, people, and customs of Spain. Many French students participate in a city-wide organization called the Alliance Francais.

All Latin students participate in a special celebration of Latin Week. On the Ides of March, pupils dressed in ancient Roman togas have a party. Slides and movies depicting German life are shown in many German classes.

"This must surely be the Riviera," points out P. McCabe, as C. Weber happily agrees.
