

A tape recorder is essential in Mr. Yack's speech therapy class. P. McCabe practices as C. Andrew, R. Angel, and G. Helton listen to her pronunciation.

Specially Trained Teachers Supply Guidance For Special Activities

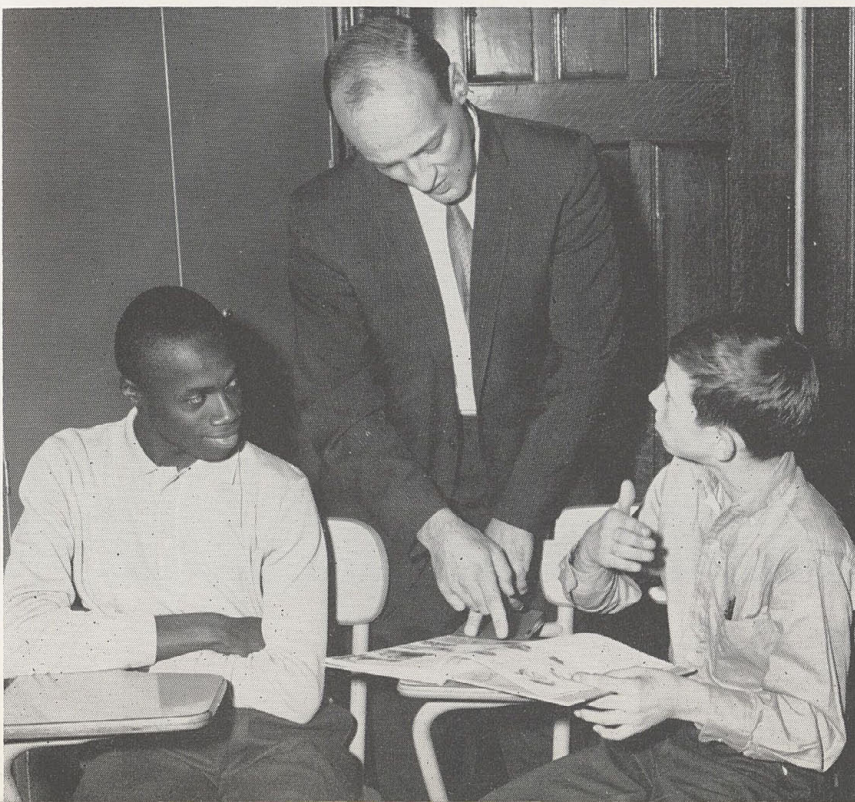

Speech therapy, deaf, and special education classes are designed to help students with particular needs.

Mr. Yacks, the speech therapist, deals with students having various speech defects. Mirrors, tape recorders, and tongue depressors are used to correct speech difficulties.

Students in special education study a variety of things and get valuable assistance from Mr. Britton. Besides following the regular curriculum, the class has learned proper telephone and general banking procedures.

Mr. Kundert gives corrective help and guidance to deaf students. He supervises their classroom learning and assists them in their social adjustments.

John Adams, Mr. Kundert, and Daniel May silently discuss homework. Deaf pupils pursue same academic course as most other students.

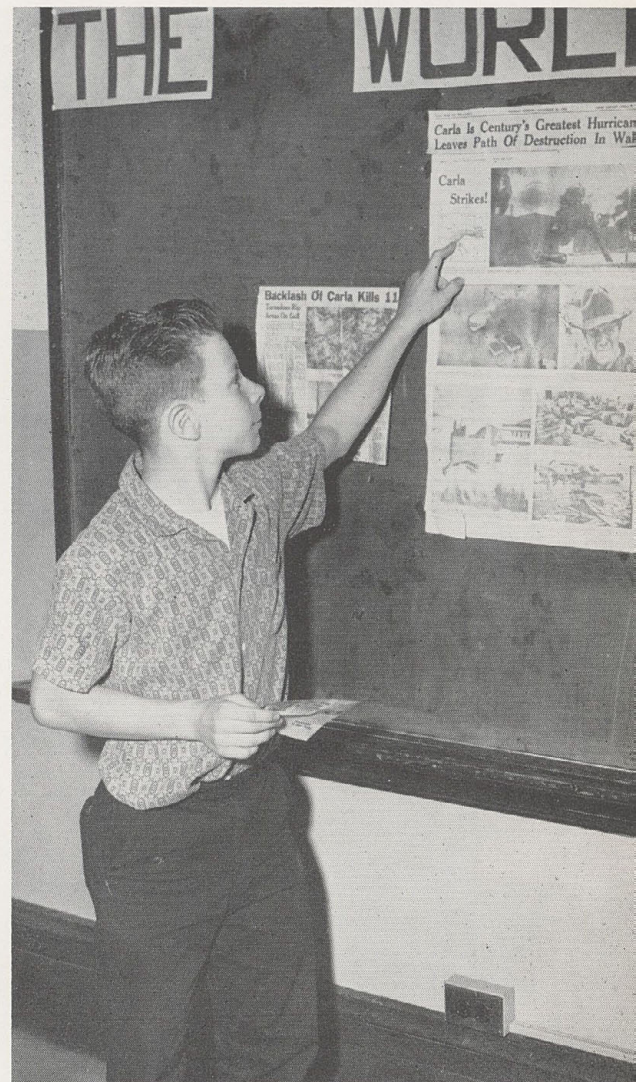

James Kundert
Deaf Classes

William Britton
Special Education

Colin Yacks
Speech Therapist

Hurricane Carla is history in the making. Billy Caruso reviews current world events in Mr. Britton's special education class.