

George Burks awaits his picture subject.

Mr. Arrington, adviser, consults with staff members Brooks Hammond, Diana Fultz, Bill Stuckey, Anne Niinemets, Gary Hammons, and Lucy Gangloff on last issue of Gargoyle.

Top Picture: Sitting: M. Pahner, R. Ferguson, D. Kirby. Standing: R. Asher, E. Fields, C. Lamb, L. Jackson, M. DeWar, C. Schell, H. Tyus.

Bottom Picture: S. Clark, C. Lamb, Mr. Arrington, Sponsor; B. Stuckey, B. Davisson, D. Kirby, A. Ilijin, L. Jackson.

Gargoyle Work Rewarding

The first Gargoyle, as it appeared in 1927, was a mimeographed, pocket-sized sheet. Today, the Gargoyle is an 11" by 17" four-page printed newspaper. Miss Hazel L. Koppenhoefer served in the advisory capacity until her retirement in 1960. Mr. John P. Arrington became the new adviser at the beginning of this school year.

Besides the change in advisers, a change has been made in the staff and the newspaper itself. In addition to the former four page-editors, there are two managing co-editors. The newspaper is published every two weeks on magazine-style paper.

Working on the Gargoyle staff is a rewarding experience. Journalism develops writing potentiality. The students also develop creativity and imagination by writing articles, laying out pages, and meeting deadlines.

Staff members have participated in activities other than setting up the Gargoyle. They interviewed such personalities as Bret Halsey and Senator Barry M. Goldwater and toured the Post-Times Star building.