Dear Colonels,

The end of any school year brings its share of joys and sadness. Much we have to look back on with pride and satisfaction. Most of our regrets are that the year had to end, that the seniors must say goodbye and carve out a new life in uncharted land.

What was so good about the past year? The trophy case crammed with awards won this past year bears eloquent testimony to excellence in athletics as well as speech and debate. The school's long dream of having a football team was realized when the students themselves raised the necessary funds. Seniors benefited from the new honors program introduced this past year. It was indeed a year to remember.

Best of all the school is moving more and more into the area of student involvement in various apostolates. The Sodality, the weekend leadership sessions, direct aid to poor families, assistance to needy students with tutoring, --all these show Catholic education in its finest role.

Much of our sadness is saying goodbye to Brothers Dan Donovan and Howard Knachel. With us all four years, these two Marianists left us an example worthy of lifetime emulation. We thank God for two such teachers.

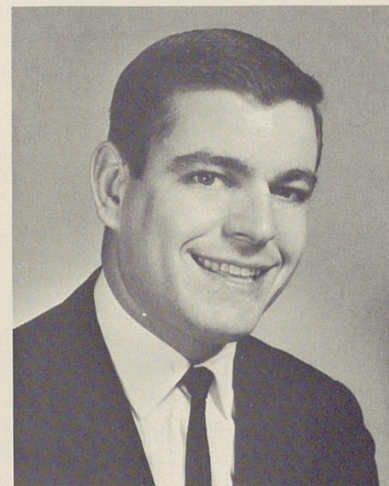

Sincerely yours in J.M.J.,

Brother Donald McKee, S.M.

Dedication

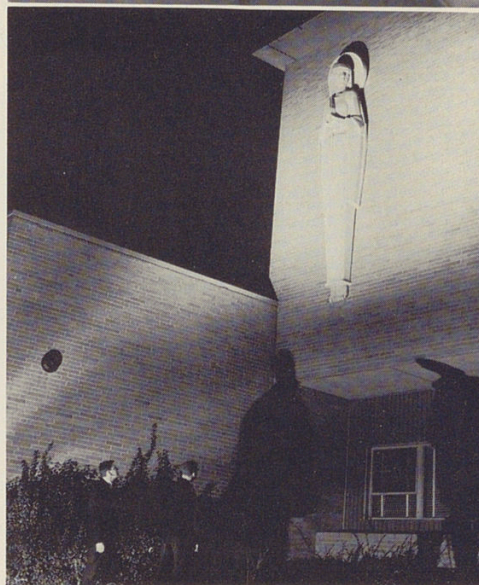

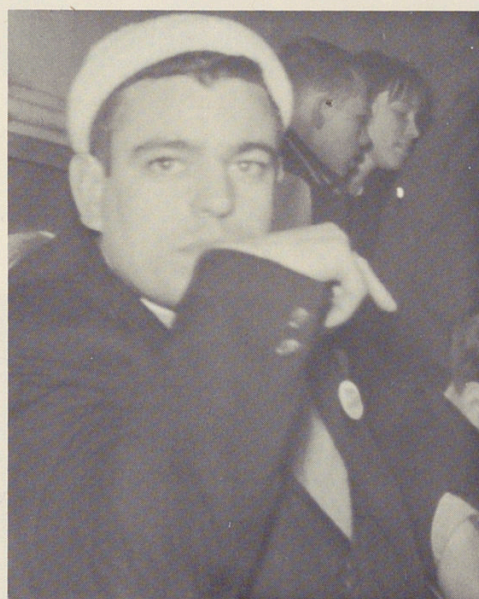

When we, as Freshmen, entered Covington Catholic, Brother Dan Donovan entered with us. It seems rather fitting that since he entered with us, he also leaves Covington Catholic with us. But Brother Dan's stay here will not be forgotten by the many people with whom he came in contact. There is so much that can be said about this generous person that we could fill an entire page so instead, we, the Senior Class, would like to dedicate this Yearbook to the person who has helped many of us very much and who has aptly been called "Brother Covington Catholic" . . . Bro. Dan Donovan.

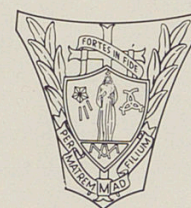

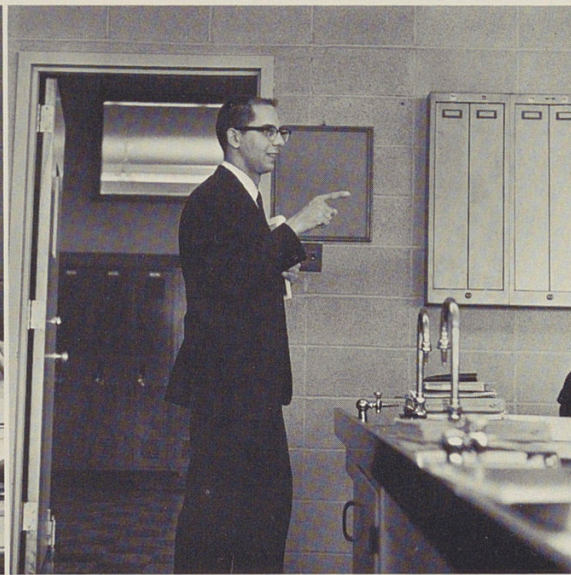

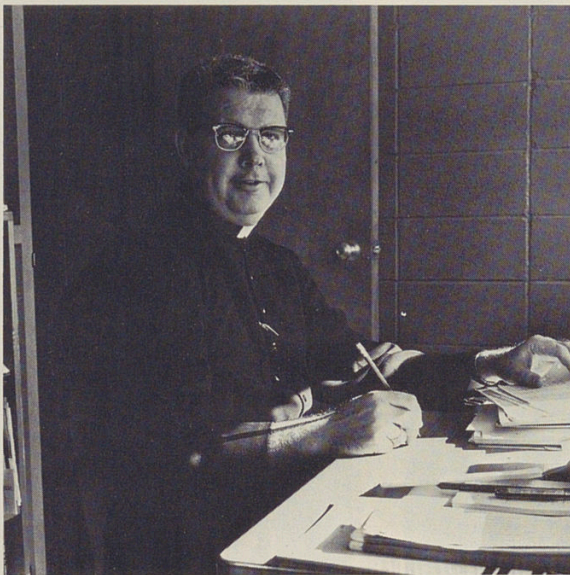

Brother Daniel Donovan, S.M.

Bro. Dan always tried to make his classes as enjoyable as possible.

Bro. Dick Heil, S.M.

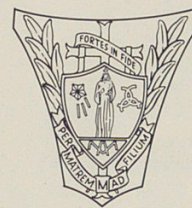

Brother Richard Heil, S.M.

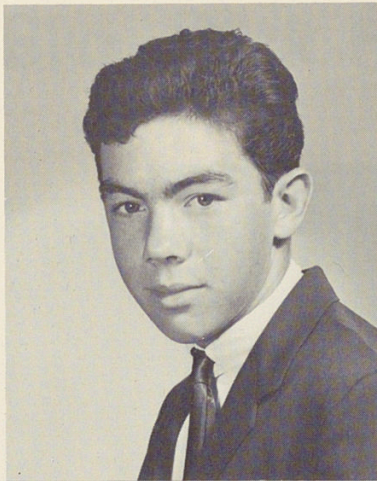

Although his stay at Covington Catholic was a very short one, many of us came to know and like Brother Dick very much. In the few months that he was here teaching, Brother Dick became a very outstanding member of the Family of Covington Catholic; a member that we will miss. He was very active in unifying the Freshman class and also in building up the spirit of the upperclassmen. For this and for his unfailing interest in the many school activities, Brother Dick deserves the thanks of the entire student body.

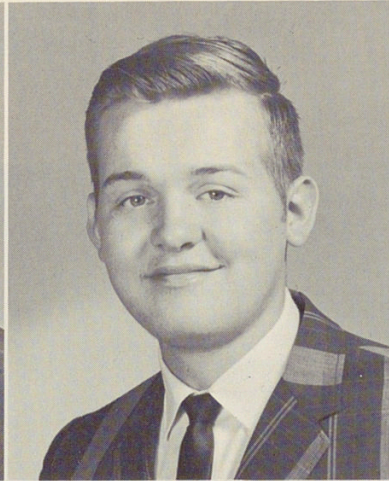

Brother Dick and the other Brothers join in the Holy Sacrifice of the Mass in the community's chapel.

ORGANIZATIONS

Student Senate

The 1965-66 Student Senate can boast a successful year despite a couple of setbacks that dimmed its progress at times.

In August before the first semester began, Brother Dan and the newly elected Student Senate officers met to plan the upcoming year. It was decided that the goals of this year's senate would be to provide activities that would interest all the students, to encourage the participation of everyone in these activities, and to strengthen the prevailing school spirit. Brother McKee showed his intention of helping toward these aims by agreeing to reinstate the Freshman Initiation that was abandoned two years ago.

The first of our setbacks came in October when the homerooms were flooded with students selling yearbook subscriptions, senate cards, Pumpkin Prowl tickets, or collecting for the Seminary Drive. A great deal of credit goes to all those homerooms who kept their heads above water during this month. With everything going on at once it is no wonder that the results weren't quite as good as anticipated.

In November the Student Senate sponsored the annual Campbell Lodge Festival. Nothing more must be said about the greatest festival in the school's history other than congratulations to chairman Mike Whelan and all the others responsible for a job well done.

At the semester break the Student Senate received the disappointing news that Brother Dan would be unable to return as our moderator. Despite the difficulty of such a mid-year switch in moderators, however, the senate was able to do a creditable job. The determination and dedication of our new moderator, Brother Bob Ivory, was the main reason for this. Under his guidance the last of the semi-formal dances, the Mardi Gras, was held in February. Throughout Lent contributions poured in for the Bishop's Relief Fund giving us an outstanding total at the end. In April the school launched a Chocolate Drive that was backed by the Student Senate enabling us to field our first football team next fall.

Many other new programs were initiated in 1966 including a Music-Art-Drama Festival, a well organized Career Night, and a performance by the Cincinnati Symphony. Perhaps every goal was not achieved as hoped last September, but the members of the student senate did their best to make the past year a good one for everyone.

The school year was a type of "Great Awakening" for the Spiritual-Cultural Committee of the Student Senate. The Father Beiting Drive, the Music-Arts-Drama Festival, and the performance by the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra were all conducted under the committee's auspices. While many undertakings did not measure up to expectations, all represented a greater interest than ever before in this aspect of student life.

ING: Joseph Kreimborg, Chairman Paul Tepe, Michael Donovan, Robert
Wieck, Daniel Eggemeier, Charles Stander.

A true Colonel could never forget the Friday night dances or the well-planned semi-formal dances that are put on during the school year. They are the result of the hard work and dedication of the members of the Social Committee. We all owe these members much thanks and praise for their time and effort.

L. to r.: Edward Rice, Michael Burke, Chairman Michael Major, Robert Rutemiller, John Pohlman.

The Spirit Committee was perhaps the busiest of the standing committees in this year's student senate. Intramural baseball and basketball, track and field day, and all rallies were the responsibility of this group. Their hardest job, however, was keeping track of the homeroom's standings for the spirit banner. We hope that the strength of this committee will grow in the coming years.

L. to r.: Bernard Brown, William Fleck, Chairman Thomas Thiel, Stephen McCafferty, William Kathman.

Question: How can anyone be alert and smiling at 7:30 in the morning?

Sodality

If you have read even this far after seeing the title of the article, you have done better than most. The very word "Sodality" seems to remind people of "goodie-goodies", religion books and all kinds of such evil things. And it is these impressions that give Sodality two strikes before it even gets to bat. It is further true that Sodality almost missed the third strike as well this year. Usually, it is agreed that the Sodality was certainly not as active and was probably not as successful as in past years. However, a new door was opened this year for looking at this organization. Sodality has, and must more, become a way of living, rather than a praying session for one hour every week. It has, and must, become an opportunity to sit down and talk frankly about whatever one may wish, be it girls, dating, drinking, school work or what have you. It seems that too often when teenagers are in a group, they feel that they have to put on a front, and maintain their impression as being a neat guy or a neat girl. In Sodality one can, and should be able to, say anything he or she likes without any fears of anyone holding it against them. And, as Sodalists strive to better themselves together, they need not fear such tags as candy, sissy or goodie-goodie for saying something they feel of a religious nature.

However, Sodality cannot stay within itself. It needs to spread to, and help, others. An example of this was a group discussion with some girls from Notre Dame. Later, this group decided to take about fifty little colored kids on a picnic. This is the type of ACTION that Sodality would like to develop. And, of course, one should not forget the fun and genuine satisfaction experienced in this type of work. Such ideas as speaking straight, playing hard, and helping others are the ones that need to be associated with Sodality. And, although it may have been a very feeble one, I feel that these ideas have had a start this year.

Speech and Debate

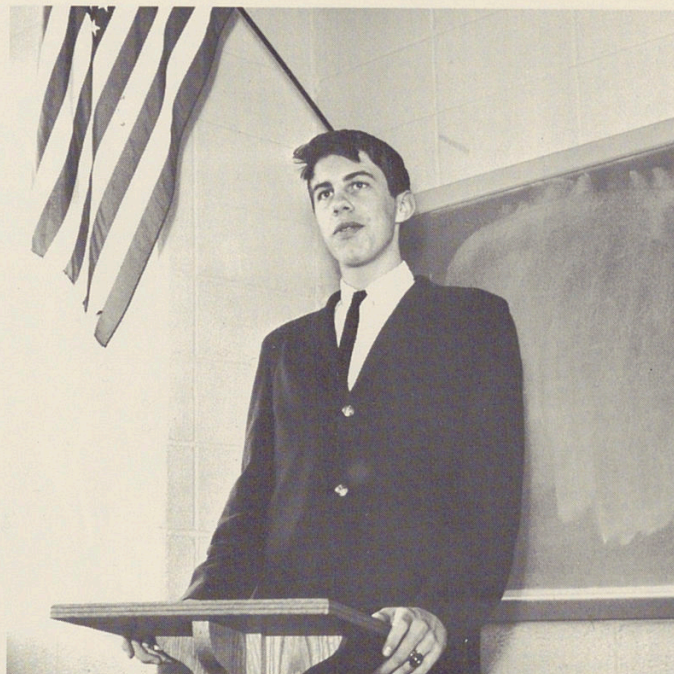

The Speech and Debate Club had its failures as well as triumphs this year. The debate team, although failing in its bid to retain the regional championship, did bring home some first place trophies. In the field of speech, several trophies, medals and pins were won at tournaments in the area. A few trips were taken and many of the members will participate in summer workshops in order to brighten next year's horizons.

Contact

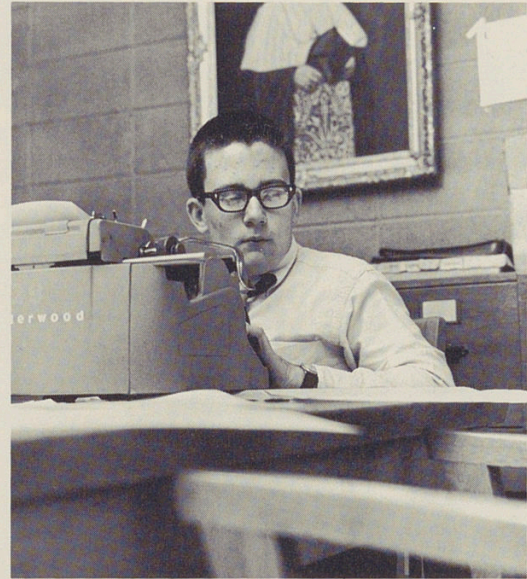

CONTACT for the Yearbook.

J. P. Lyons is a worker; one of the few around who can work without praise or acknowledgement. Independence from praise is a valuable gift, more valuable than praise itself.

J. P. is responsible for the great success which the CONTACT had this year. In switching the format from magazine to newspaper, he was able to print more news more often than ever before. He handled a large staff of writers fairly and wisely, thus keeping the CONTACT readable and interesting. By stressing individuality in writing, fresh points of view, and personal and objective evaluation of events, J. P. was able to print articles by a staff writing not of necessity but of interest.

The staff seemed to draw their interest from J. P. himself. He often stayed at school from dismissal until ten or eleven o'clock working to meet the deadline. Often he had to proofread, edit and type all the articles with the help of only a few interested staff members. But then J. P. never asks for much help; he would rather do it himself whether he has to or not.

The result of his efforts was a new CONTACT, full of new features and modernized standard features, to keep pace with the new school Covington Catholic has become. No, J. P. could not have done it alone; he needed the help of the moderator Mr. Dorn, the great work of the staff, and the occasional aid of a typist, for J. P.'s typing is too much "hunt" and not enough "peck." But even though he could not have done it alone, J. P. Lyons would have tried: that's the way he is.

Yearbook Staff

There is not really much to say for the Yearbook Staff since there really was no such thing. Although it is true that a record amount of funds were collected and plenty of ideas were suggested, the real quality was missing . . . People willing to work. So unfortunately, the Yearbook was completed through the hard work of a few trusty people. To them I can offer my sincerest thanks.

Physics Club

The furtherment of interest and knowledge in physics was this year's physics club's main purpose. Under the guidance of Mr. Kasselman the club accomplished a great deal. During meetings members experimented with such things as black light, ultrasonic sound and various phases of electronics. Members also paved the way for future members by starting construction on a large reflector telescope and by doing preliminary work and research on lasers.

Biology Club

L. to r.: William Jordan, J. Dorger, Charles Scheper, J. Dickman, Stephen Heidrich.

Under the guidance of Brother Gene Loewer, S.M., the Biology Club took huge strides in its attempt to become a very active organization. Field trips were planned and a few new animals were added to the facilities of the school. The boys built the cages for the lizards and the like themselves. Indeed the Biology Club is starting its rise to the top of the most popular clubs.

Covington Catholic's "It's Academic" trio started slowly and then tapered off on the program aired on WLW-T January 2. The panel, made up of seniors Tom Schaeper and Mike Kreyling and junior Larry Funke, finished in front of Bethel-Tate High School but behind New Richmond.

Answering some questions too quickly and encountering others for which they had no answers put the team in a difficult position early in the game. Going into the third round of questions, C.C.H. had amassed a grand total of 5 points. Needless to mention, this is not an advantageous position in which to be when it usually takes around 250 points to be in contention. But, under the superb leadership of Father McDermott and with the cheering of our supporters, the team determined not to toss in the towel. In our part of the third round, C.C.H. picked up valuable ground in running their total to around 100 points. Sensing the chance of victory, the team dominated the Grab Bag round. But alas, the time was too short and C.C.H. fell short in its bid by the narrow margin of a single question. For their efforts, however, C.C.H. was awarded a set of literature books and a full page in the yearbook.

Band

During its second year, the Concert Band of Covington Catholic has increased considerably. This increase has not been so much in size, but rather in the musical abilities of its members.

The Band and its jazz trio have brought the name of Covington Catholic High School to top standards during the past year by performing in different events and places in the area, such as Notre Dame High School, Fort Wright Civic Hall, Parents-Teachers meetings at Covington Catholic, Coney Island, Covington's Memorial Day parade and for many student events at school.

Under the direction of Brother Thomas Salerno, S.M., the band can play a variety of music compositions consisting of classical pieces, jazz and popular tunes.

We hope that in the future the size of the band will increase and will reach the status of a marching band. If this past year's progress continues, it will not be a hope, but a reality.

Poster Club

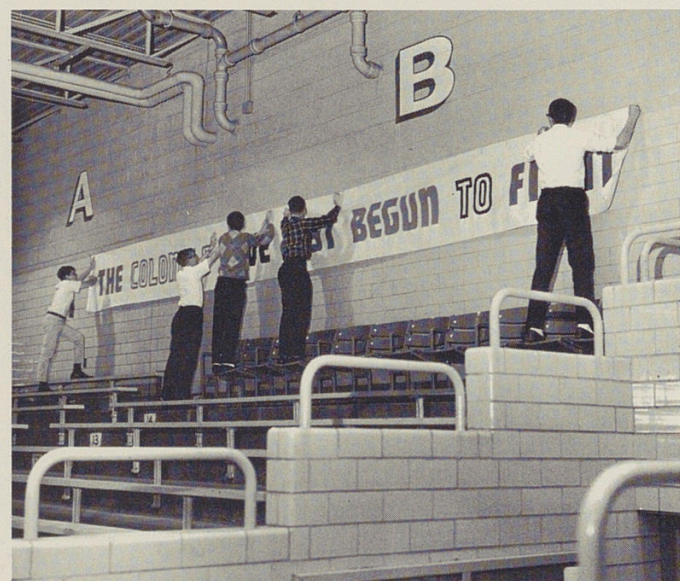

"Hey! Who painted the "A" upside-down?"

No basketball game or rally would be complete without the many eye-catching signs that are draped along every wall. Without fail, the members of the Poster Club would spend the days before every big event making the signs that would add just the right touch. To every member of this club we offer our thanks and appreciation for a job well done.

SALUTATORY SPEECH

No man is an island; no man stands alone. Each man's joy is joy to me; each man's grief is my own. Brother McKee, Reverend Fathers, members of the faculty, parents, friends, and members of the graduating class of 1966 these are more than mere words to a popular song. They are the very reason for our being here this morning. In our four years at Covington Catholic, I think that we have come to a realization of the real meaning behind these words as a result of the experiences that we have shared together while we were here.

On an April morning five years ago, over two hundred eighth grade students gathered at Covington Catholic for their high school entrance examination. Less than six months later we were assembled once again--this time as the Freshman class. As we entered the building on the first morning of school in September we were strangers to each other, timid, alone and confused by the enormity and complexity of the high school system.

It did not take very long, however, for these strangers to get to know one another. The seniors welcomed us to Covington Catholic by an initiation. This program successfully brought our class together as the Freshmen were compelled to join forces to survive the initiation stunts that were contrived for us. Soon after the initiation was completed we encountered for the first time the mysterious ways of our cafeteria, the memories of which have stayed with us throughout our four years here. Among the other highlights of that first year were a championship swimming team which brought home a runner up trophy from the state meet in Louisville, and our first Campbell Lodge Festival. It was truly this festival which taught us the meaning of the words "no man is an island" because we learned that we had to work together if we wanted it to be successful.

The Freshman year passed quickly into the Sophomore. This was a period of transition; a growing up for our class. We were now in a position to sneer at the lowly, incoming freshmen, yet we were not old enough nor wise enough to show the initiative and leadership of the upperclassmen. It was during this year that our class spirit began to really develop under the guidance of several interested homeroom teachers. The best example of this class spirit that I can remember was the sophomore picnic to Butler State Park.

In our junior year we copped the coveted spirit banner four times without much challenge from the other divisions. The juniors lead the way to outstanding contributions for the Seminary Drive and the Bishop's Relief Fund. It was a year of good basketball that took us all the way to the regional tournament at Campbell County, and it was the year that we put on and enjoyed our first prom. The junior year ended on a note of unity with the presentation of rings to the future seniors. The ring was distinguishing characteristic that made our class separate and distinct from all other groups and marked the entrance into our final stage as high school students.

As seniors we shared together for the last time the enjoyment of the Pumpkin Prowl, the Christmas Dance, and the Mardi Gras. None of us can forget the appearance of the Town and Country as tables, chairs, and dance floor lay buried under mounds of confetti when the last dance was over.

It was a year of remembering trig functions, Ohm's Law or learning about Shakespeare's Macbeth, and for those seniors who were looking ahead there was the added responsibility of filling out job applications or college forms.

Despite the hard work with the books, however, we found time to run the most successful Campbell Lodge Festival in our school's history. Once again the lesson of working together which we learned as Freshmen paid dividends when we were seniors. Then just one month ago the presentation of a powerful drama by high school students. Father McDermott said that it could be done. Under his inspiration and guidance we did it--THE POWER AND THE GLORY, one of the best of Covington Catholic's perennially great plays. Finally we concluded the year on a note of recreation as we enjoyed together for the last time the junior-senior prom.

These are the events of the past four years that stand out in my mind because they lead to the social, mental, and spiritual maturity of the individuals involved. They are experiences that taught us the necessity of depending on other people, our need for other people, and they taught us how to share together the joys and disappointments of others. By learning this we are able to push aside the barriers that keep us from communicating with one another and ultimately they have made us free.

These events and experiences were available to us because our parents made them so, and because we have an interested faculty and administration here at Covington Catholic. We owe them much. On behalf of the senior class then, I would like to thank all of them for the time and energy they have spent to teach us that no man is an island. Thank you.

Valediction: something said in parting; a farewell utterance.

I have a duty to discharge as valedictorian. But before I fulfill this responsibility, there are a few things I must say to you. I would like you to listen, I will not be long.

I must first speak to you of the present. This is a milestone in our lives. They tell us, although from where we stand, we cannot see milestones. We must wait until we can look back on it. But we should take their word for it, for they know, and we should live these times as sincerely as we can, so that when we do look back, we will remember.

But we can look back now and remember the last four years. They may not have been the happiest four years for some, or the most satisfying for others. But one thing is certain: they will be the most unforgettable for all of us. Our memories of these years will pay dividends forever. But the past is no substitute for the present. We must file our memories away and take them out only when the present can spare us for a few moments.

I look forward to those few moments. I hope that I will be able to conjure up the emotional turmoil that I feel right now. I guess it is safe to say that we are all a little confused at this moment. Even those of us who have decided what is to be their vocation in life have yet to determine just how they will achieve it. For the rest of us, we who have not yet encountered the plans which God had drawn up for us, this is a day full of uncertainty, framed in anxiety, and perhaps touched with fear.

Our uncertainty is nothing to be alarmed of they tell us. But that is hard to accept because, being human, we need a place to anchor ourselves. When we are uncertain, when we drift, we experience a taste of the punishment of Cain, a sort of placelessness, a sense of unbelonging to anything or anyone. But this will pass they say, and from this we should take hope. Like a roulette ball, we will ultimately find our niche. It may be painful and it may take a long time, but if we stick to it, He will not hide it forever.

There is a certain anxiety, a worry, in this search, as well there should be. We are standing before a darkened doorway. We are compelled to cross the threshold because we know that we belong in the next room. But at the same time, the darkness frightens us. We would like to know what is there before we step. It would be comforting, but it is not to be. You see, across the threshold is adulthood, maturity, an awareness of a better life, a fuller existence. And we are not adults, nor are we fully mature, nor do we know of a better life. We can only gather up our courage, throw off the things of a child, and grow. Then, when we open our eyes again, the room will be bright and the doorway will be at our backs, and we will know that we have taken the step. We will never know just when or how it came about, because maturing is not a matter of the will; we will only know that the light is brighter, better suited for seeing what we really are. And that, that knowledge of what we really are, is the beginning.

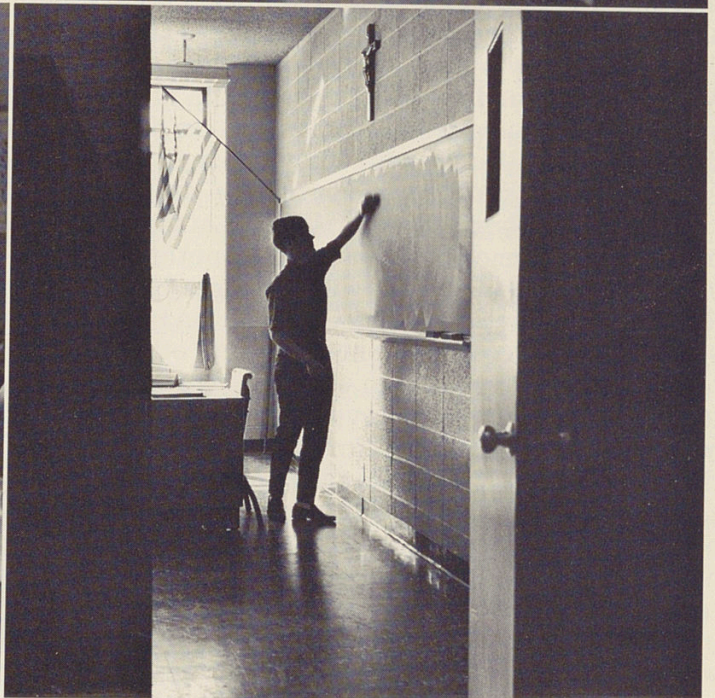

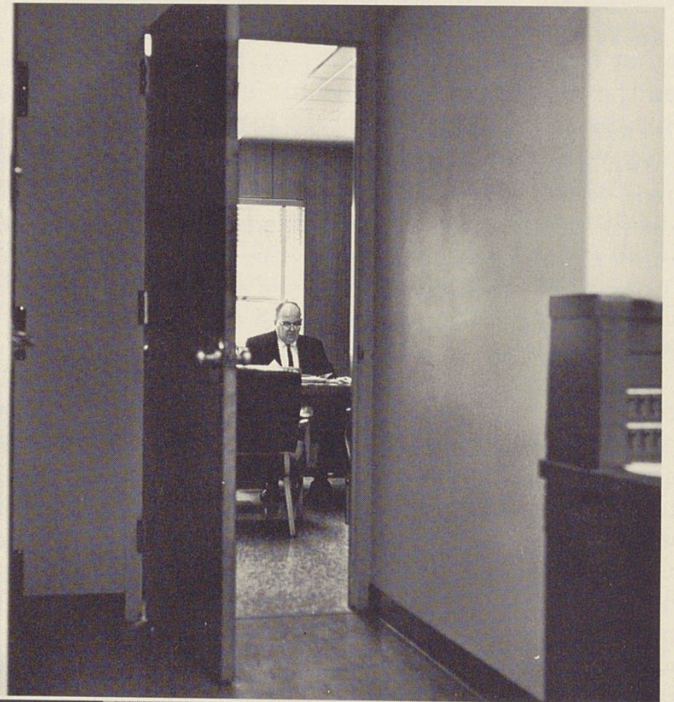

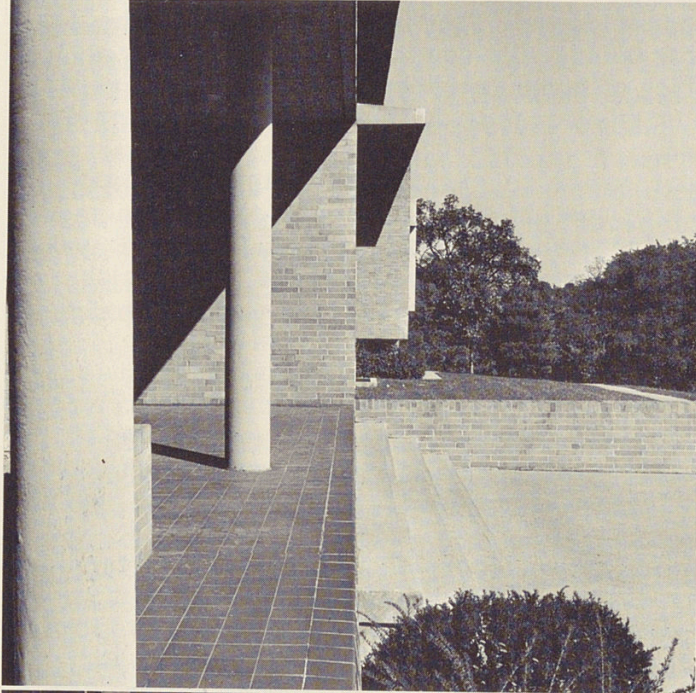

The fear. There is nothing to be afraid of they say, but I cannot help it, I have never graduated before. We cannot help knowing something of this world we are about to enter. We know that man can destroy entire cities with a single bomb; yet he persists in settling his quarrels by fighting. He can construct an artificial heart and perform other truly wondrous medical feats; yet some still suffer leprosy and smallpox and other archaic diseases. He builds supermarkets and restaurants on every road in the land; yet his neighbor is still hungry. Man has given the good life to many; yet he refuses even the ordinary life to those whom he judges inferior. There are so many good things to live for; yet some refuse to live. They are the ones without a purpose. Sometimes I feel that I have no purpose in this contradictory world. Maybe you feel the same way. I am afraid, as I look into the future, that there is no place there for me. If this is so, if there is no place, then this graduation is empty and meaningless. Honors or trophies or praise or tomorrow are all empty because they hold no meaning. But this graduation is not empty, for even in the most confused, twisted, and incomprehensible world, there is a place for me, for all of us. I believe that we can have those places if we try. I believe that we can change the world if we try. Maybe not greatly or for a long time, but we can try. That is important in life: that we try. We can give the world something that it needs: people who are brave enough or just plain stubborn enough to try to change the wrong things in it.

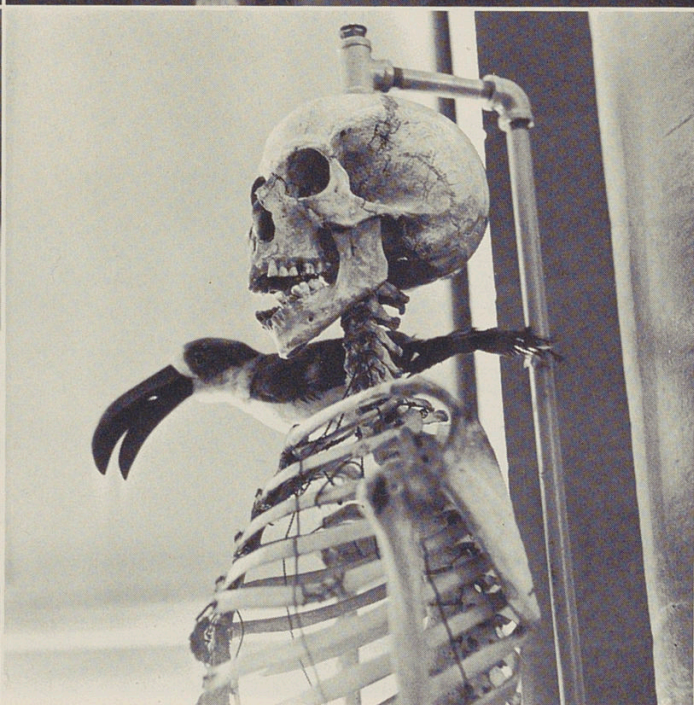

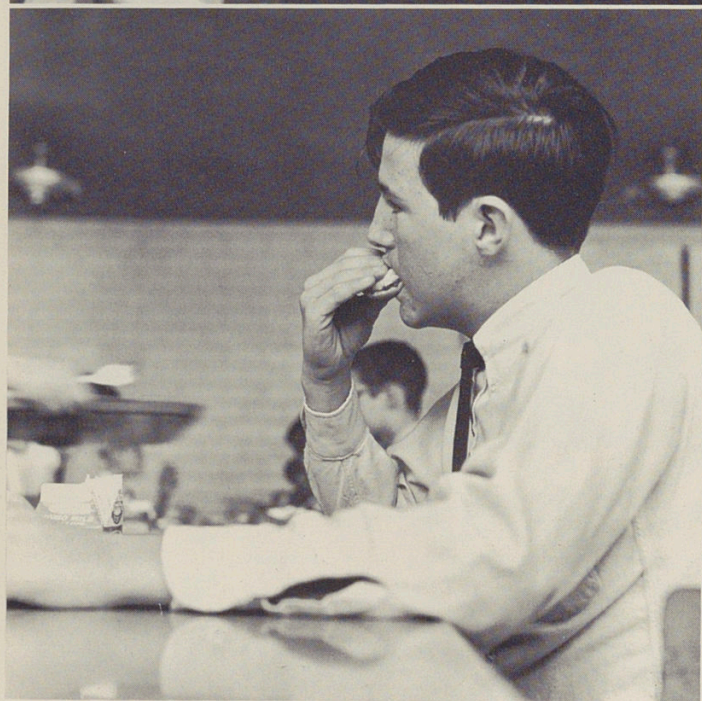

So never let anyone tell you that your efforts are insignificant, that you are an unimportant creature. No creature with the purpose and the destiny of man can ever be insignificant.

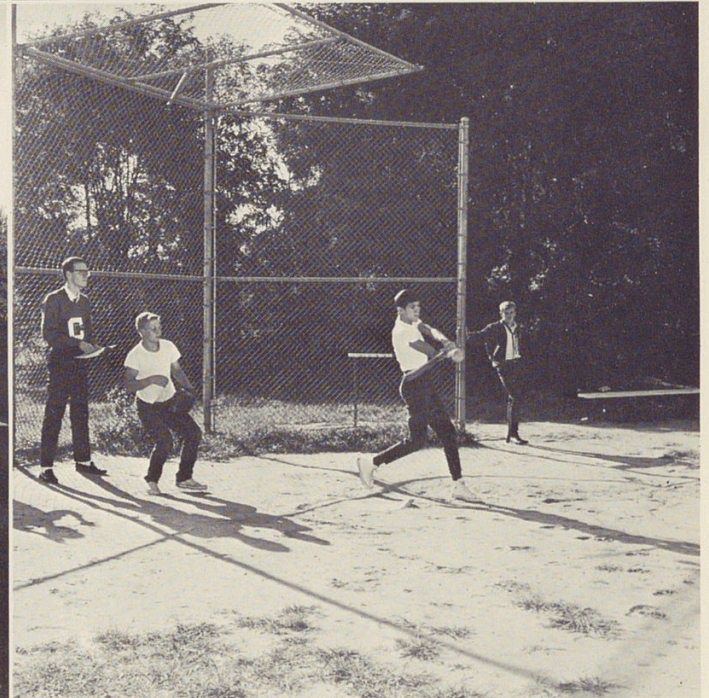

My valedictory speech is finished. There remains only to discharge my duty, to utter the valediction: Goodbye.
