

speech & debate

bill wilkerson and joe conley prepare debate notes.

george schewe prepares speech for upcoming tournament.

This year, the speech and debate club staged a comeback. After losing over 3/4 of the members in the past two years, the ranks were again swelled by an addition of 10 new members. Under the direction of bro. mike trainor, s.m., the club attended as many tournaments as possible, and brought back honors from six of them. speech and debate, for those who do not know, is an organization whose purpose is to advance and further the art of public speaking. Divided into two divisions, debate and speech, the former's self explanatory, while speech events entail anything from poetry reading to telling a story. The speech and debate club members are required to keep long hours, and give up most of their saturdays during the winter, but the time and effort is worth it when the medals, ribbons and trophies are brought home.

Junior dan moser gives tips on speaking to underclassmen.

