

Penny Rowland has been employed by M. H.S. as head wardrobe mistress for the National Thespians. Jim Whelpley is head sales manager for the Quality Christmas Card Company. Casey Jones grows silkworms on his mother's mimosa tree. Betsy Aston models health shoes for Dr. Scholl.

I found Mary Pfister down in Florida training elephants for Barnum and Bailey. Larry Mueller is an aerial artist with the same circus. Ned Dewire, who owns a deep-sea fishing company, is also in Florida.

On my way to Pensacola Naval Air Force Base, I was pulled over for speeding by none other than Bob Jones, a State Trooper. At the base I saw Ken Bachmann, ace pilot. I bet he never thought he would ever pilot planes like those he used to fly in study halls.

Sue Swanson, gym teacher, slaves all day to make the kiddies behave. For an avocation she tinkers with old cars, especially green Hudsons. Lois Rowley draws pictures for Esquire. Wow! Eddie Singer is still a singer. Speaking of singers, I saw Jim Hartman, crooner, thrill the girls at the Stork Club with the latest hits.

Jim Roessler is a truck farmer outside New York City. Phyllis Chaney teaches swimming and life saving at the W.M.C.A. She saved Bob Bredenfoerder, a Texan wrestler, from drowning one day. Bless her soul! Because of her love for eggs, Sandra Jones raises hens on her farm near Louisville.

Out in California Dick "Clinches" Cosby instructs love scenes for Paramount Pictures. Gloria Mackey is a fraternity house mother at U.C.L.A. Fred Mansell owns a dude ranch in Death Valley.

Peter Clark races hot rods in all the parks in the country. He always was a real "Hot Rod". Sonya Voorheis advertises peas by portraying the Jolly Green Giant. Janet Gray tests mattresses. Sleeping was always one of her favorite subjects in school, too.

Bob Stefanowski has made his dream come true. He's a pitcher for the Detroit "Tigers". Dick Pyle, a Ford executive, spends most of his time at the ball park making "the face" and cheering Stef on.

Jim Root has a nursery, shrubbery, that is. Out in Arizona Marilyn Gerlaugh molds pottery.

After I had seen everybody who remained in our country, I piloted my supersonic plane over to the Eastern Hemisphere. In Paris I saw a show featuring Carol Evans and Emily Cummings as can-can dancers. In Venice Robert Doersam pushes a gondola through the canals. Donna Lyttleton is a snake charmer in India. I found Rob Shackelford Prime Minister of his beloved England. In Norway Karen Dollenmayer and Diana Young, field hockey players, were competing in the Olympics with the United States team. What a laugh!

Ellen Taylor is a missionary in South Africa. Harry Walters has his own T.V. comedy hour in Timbuktu. On my way home I found Toni Kleine in Alaska. She's a seal trapper there.

I'm sure the year I spent finding each of the graduates was as enjoyable and fun as the six years they spent together in good old M.H.S. Some of them certainly did surprise me. Didn't they you, too?
