

Activities . . .

Here we go into another part of the life of our town. Through activities you sort of find yourself, as George found himself while talking with Emily in the drugstore. Here's where folks get their deep-down enjoyment in life. Sure, there's not much of the three R's here, but it's the friendships, the experiences, the kind of learning you can't get from books. This is where we learn to help each other, and by doing that, we learn to help ourselves. Yep, there's an awful lot of good things in this life that you can't touch, or see, but which are worth more than all the money in the world. Let's take a little walk through these next few pages, and notice the joy, the fun, and the inward satisfaction in these people's faces.
