LATIN LIVES TODAY

Junior Classical League, the Latin club, creates interest in the Roman way of life. Often students become so absorbed in Latin grammar that they forget that this language was once used by very real people. To remind them of this, JCL sponsors several typically Roman activities. The first of these is the slave sale, in which first year Latin students are sold to upper classmen. This finances the Roman banquet, the most colorful event on JCL's calendar. At Christmas time, there is a Roman Saturnalia and in April, thousands of JCL members from all parts of the state meet and attend workshops in which ideas for programs are discussed. At last year's convention contributions from various chapters, including our own, very quickly set up a $500 scholarship which is now available to some student for advanced study in Latin with the intention of teaching. JCL is not only national, but worldwide, and has more members than any other youth organization.
