

● money and efficiency

● The monetary problems of Withrow are capably handled by Mr. Seay and his hard working staff of student helpers. All money deposits and disbursement of funds must go through his office. A school the size of Withrow is a small business concern within itself; consequently, Mr. Seay's worries are many and his time fully occupied. To add to his and his staff's headaches are teachers and students who forget to sign deposit slips or use the correct account number. Mr. Seay just smiles, gets the money straightened out, and begins on the next group. Withrow's sound financial status is a direct result of his careful administration of a difficult and often thankless job of school treasurer.
