

● library, heart of learning

One of the first things that happens to a freshman is his introduction to the library through his English class. Miss Pooley and Miss Rehring conduct these classes in order to acquaint the new students with the facilities available and to teach them how to use the library properly. In later years they are taught more technical procedures. The library provides a variety of magazines, a selection of books, and reference materials to aid in the completion of assigned tasks. During any period of the day, students can be seen browsing among the books, paging through the magazines, or preparing a paper from encyclopedias on the shelves.
