

“QUIET NOW! YOU KNOW THERE ARE SOME PEOPLE HERE WHO WANT TO STUDY”

When Withrow's students are not in class, attempting to understand the deeper problems of our age, they occupy their spare time in a study hall. Some of the more ambitious students continue their quest of knowledge during a study hall; others simply continue quests. Some students catch up on the sleep they didn't get last night; others, in a belligerent mood, prefer to hurl missiles at nearby comrades. A study hall is what the student chooses to make it; at any rate, there's no rest for the teacher in charge.
