

OUR FACULTY MEMBERS ENJOY A DELICIOUS MEAL SERVED IN THE LUNCHROOM

Teachers are really human beings after all! They are seen here enjoying the excellent food served in the teachers' lunch room at Withrow. The faculty is actually guilty of bragging when it mentions the superior quality of the food offered Withrow teachers. "It is the best food in Cincinnati," is an often reiterated statement. The relaxation experienced while chatting and luncheon saves many a disposition. The conversations occurring during lunch vary as much as the individuals participating in them—trips, books, concerts, dramas, clothes, and friends are favorite topics. Do teachers ever discuss their pupils? Indeed, yes. The fact that the conversation and thoughts about pupils usually hold a note of sincere concern for the person in question should not be surprising. Teachers have no desire to be ogres, and would rather help and encourage than punish the members of their classes. That fine spirit of mental kinship and true understanding between teacher and pupil is a goal occasionally realized and always desired. Withrow pupil-teacher relations are excellent.
