Sports of today represent an era of highly-specialized athletics. Nowadays innovations such as intricate formations, superior deception, and careful planning are characteristic of the outstanding teams. For a great part, these better squads are the product of first class coaching. A successful coach must be versatile. He must not only have a thorough knowledge of his particular sport and a love for it, but he must be a leader of young men. He must earn the respect and confidence of his players. Withrow can certainly be proud of its coaching staff. The Tiger mentors have molded their material into smooth-functioning units. As a result of this competent instruction, the Tigers have hung up notable marks. By teaching sportsmanship and teamwork along with fundamentals, Withrow's ten-man staff exemplifies what is meant by "real coaches."
