

About the first of November the hoops in the Withrow gym began to vibrate under a steady rain of basketballs. In preparation for a tough seventeen-game schedule (plus two post-season games) Coach John Huheey was starting to build his '50-'51 cage crew around five returning lettermen. By evenly mixing a good fast break with a possession-type offense and by using an effective switching man-to-man defense, the Tigers rolled up a praiseworthy 12-7 record, winning six of their last seven contests. Center Dave Plunkett, playing the pivot, was the key man for manipulating rebounds and outlet passes into fast breaks. Much of the team's success was due to its control of both boards. The Orange and Black cagers bagged second place in the PHSL with an 8-2 league mark and were runners-up (by two slim points) in the four-team Norwood Tournament.

struck a winning vein in the basketball gold mines.

While driving towards the basket, Holloman literally flies through the air after being fouled. Tigers edged Hughes 42-39.
