

Robert J. Pfister
Art Adviser

Mildred Ladley
Literary Adviser

Charles Nicely
Business Adviser

Construction and promotion of the ever-popular yearbook causes much time and energy to be relinquished by the business, literary, ad, and art staffs, who strive to create it as a product of importance, satisfaction, and achievement, worthy of recognition. This is a vital job which is largely anticipated each year by both the members of the staffs and advisers. Layouts, sigs, photographs, captions, headlines, cartoons, cover, theme, advertising, promoting, and production are just a few of the many duties these people perform in order to acquire success. At the same time, another constant worry is deadlines, that have to be attained by a specified and precise time. The patient advisers, Mrs. Ladley, Mr. Pfister, and Mr. Nicely, play important roles in undertaking the accomplishment of this feat in a satisfactory manner. The excited activity, ambition, and effort of these students aid them in contending with the many problems which may develop. All of these people deserve much credit and praise for doing such commendable work.

readers' enlightenment and enjoyment

Annual Lit. Staff. Seated—A. Boyer; N. Discher; D. Durning; M. Schmidt; L. Triftshouser. Standing—S. Shaffer; J. Cooper; M. Wingerter; G. Marshall; S. Ryan; C. Allen; H. Pandorf; K. Stith; W. Fey.

