

Demonstration is vital in gaining knowledge

The hermit menaces Edward as an English I class dramatizes "The Prince and the Pauper."

The Withrow library's wide selection of books provides students with the best of all types of literature. Here students learn what scholars have said in all ages. Miss Pooley and Miss Rehring give needed assistance to those seeking references, outside reading material, or special magazines. Classroom discussions enable us to widen our views by hearing what others think. An English I class discusses the dramatization of The Prince and the Pauper, a novel read by most freshmen. A hula-hula skirt and a burlap sack are only two of the unusual properties used to recreate this scene.
