

Girls "hepped up" over sports find G.A.A. their club.

As hockey, volleyball, and basketball, three of the four major girls' sports, gets under way, the really active G.A.A.'er puts everything she has into the game. Hockey starts off the field, while the football players work out in another. Any feminine aspirant who can take a few skinned shins and enjoy hurling across the ground at break-neck speed is eligible for this sport. In early winter the sound of bouncing volleyballs may be heard in the girls' gym. After the Christmas holidays end, the girls come to school "raring to go" at basketball. Although girls' basketball is milder than boys', the introduction of several new rules has lessened the difference.

Gals cry, "Ground, sticks. Ground, sticks. Ground, sticks. Bully!"
