

Far from the limelight, the backstage helpers now receive their due applause. Little progress would be made without the help and unflagging spirit of those who built the set, collected properties, prepared publicity, and made-up the characters. Long hours of after-school and evening work culminated in a sturdy and attractive set, all props on hand, (even an Egyptian mummy case) clever advertising via napkins, and convincing make-up. Although the curtain has long descended, let's have a call for those behind the scenes.

the witty three-acter presented by Withrow Players,

Sandy and June, lovers. "What a lovely bracelet, Maggie!"

Everyone awaits Sherry's wants.

"Sherry says you've written a play."

"Ah, yes, Lorraine tells us of Lord Bottomley."

England's Rover boy does his latest song.

"I shall lose no time reading it, eh Maggie?"
