

Even before the entrance of the United States into the war, an appeal had been made for books and magazines as reading matter for the boys in army camps. At Woodward, Mrs. McDaniel with the assistance of the Girl Reserves under the direction of Miss Juanita Randolph, launched a drive for the collection of reading material for the soldiers. After the entrance of our country into the war, and the increase in the number of men in the armed service, the drive for books was intensified. The girls were successful in accumulating a large number of excellent books and magazines of all kinds. The Girl Reserves who aided in this campaign were: Helen Kisker, Lillian Wiley, Joyce Owens, Shirley Hirt, and Virginia Zwygart.

These were supplemented by scrapbooks made by students who volunteered their services and worked after school hours on this enterprise. Students participating in this work were: Ruth Hug, Rhoda McIntosh, Lois Thomas, Ellen McCollum, Rose Edmondson, Virginia Yee, Betty Carmack, Mary Hodge, Howard Fitzsimmons, Robert Ennis, Herman Maloney, John Harris, and William Tittle.
