With the baseball season just starting, we find it time for the Annual to go to press. It is too soon to make any predictions concerning the outcome of the efforts of our boys. The Blue and White is still a green ball club. It has no veteran reserve to draw upon, but it is steadily developing under the watchful eye of Mr. Edward Eshman, baseball coach, a former star of the sandlot himself.

The Bulldog hill duties are handled by Leonard King, Gerald Remer, and Dave Mattison. King and Remer also perform in the outfield, and Mattison divides his time between pitching and first base. Andy Jones and Ronald Murphy share the catching chores, with Jones also taking over first base duties. The rest of the outfield and infield is taken care of by Millard Campbell at third, Estel Cannon at short, Elwood Feeney at second, and Jim Cornett in right field. Oldham and Murphy also see action in the outfield.

With most of the season left to play, the Woodward Baseball Team of 1943 has hopes of greater success in the games that remain to be played.
