Although the ballet class is a new organization at Woodward this year, the growing enthusiasm of its members indicates that it will be successful and permanent. This class, which is composed of girls from all of the grades, meets every Thursday morning during the first period. Under the supervision of their capable instructress, Miss Hazel Orr, the girls learn how to have poise as well as a variety of dance movements. These dance movements not only include the position of the feet, but also that of the hands and arms; for, when she is learning ballet, the position of the hands and arms plays a very important part in the gracefulness of a ballerina. Miss Orr has been very patient with the girls even though it was very difficult for some of them to learn the harder steps.
