

Varsity football coach Ron Corradini signals in a play from the sidelines.

At the senior blood drive on Feb. 22, Marc Germano and other seniors donated a record total of 156 pints of blood.

Opening the Doors

High school opens many doors for every student. Everyone had the chance to open any door he/she wanted. Some students decided that sports was their winning combination, while others preferred involving themselves in various clubs or activities. Essentially, anyone could find something to fit his or her needs. No matter what the interest, Sycamore has something to satisfy it.

Sycamore presents a diversity of sports for those seeking to experience the thrill of victory and the "agony of defeat." Many players participated for perhaps the opportunity to play collegiate sports. Sports played an active role in many of the students' lives.

Others took part in various clubs and activities. Although many clubs were for pleasure, most of the organizations had a particular objective. From volunteering for community services to the Black Student Union, the organizations provided excellent knowledge and experience for us. These clubs sparked interest and seemed to enhance the school image.

The key to getting the most out of high school was to get involved and go beyond a formal education. The sports, clubs, and activities were just waiting for students to participate. Those who chose to partake in these understood how much this school truly has to offer.
