

Tickets for Odd Couples' Ball

Tickets for the Odd Couples Ball were sold on two days at lunch. Groups of students turned a ticket form for their entire table of 10 people. Small groups were seated together with other small groups to form complete tables. Tickets could then be picked up at lunch or at will call when couples arrived at the dance.

Everyone in the Commons throws their hands up during a song played by the ReBops. The crowd was really responsive to everything that was played and clapped along to many of the songs. In addition to clapping, almost everyone danced to the music.

Mr. Paul Alexander, Junior High teacher, sings as part of the band the ReBops. The band was a big hit at the dance as they played lots of different types of music from the oldies to some hits from today. No matter what they played people kept on dancing.

Smoke blows into the hallway leading to the Commons. The smoke was only a small part of the decor. There were lots of cool decorations.

Laura Friedmann, 11, dances with some friends. Odd Couples' wasn't just a time to dance with parents. It was also a time to dance and hang out with friends.
