

If there is one word to describe the 2021-2022 school year, it is unpredictable. From the start, the transition back to a potentially normal year and the unknowns of where the pandemic might take us next left everyone with lots of questions and few answers. Some students who hadn't ever stepped foot in the building were now sophomores, but everyone slowly found our classes, made new friends, and got back into the groove of SHS. The threat that things may change was present, but it didn't stop us from making the most of the year.

And we were subject to change, too. Another year of learning and growing helped many of us who are beginning to gain an understanding of who we are. The yearbook staff chose this theme to highlight the uncertainty of the year, but also to remind everyone of the strength and flexibility that every single student demonstrated, every single day.

Now, before you flip through these pages and reminisce on this crazy year, please remember: this is a student-run, student-made publication. We sincerely apologize for any mistakes, and we want you to know that any error made was entirely unintentional. We had a lot of fun making this book, and now we hope you have a lot of fun looking through it.

For me, it was an absolute pleasure to capture this year for everyone. I hope you enjoy: Subject to Change.

Megan Radakovich
2021-2022 Editor-in-Chief

