model united nations

Model United Nations is a public speaking and debate club where students represent a committee of a country in the model of a meeting of various countries all over the globe. Throughout the year students participate in conferences where they work in their assigned countries' best interests by making compromises, agreements, and plans of action. The club is very beginner friendly and is an excellent way for students to learn about public speaking, compromise, and diplomacy.

"I think Model UN is super helpful, especially when it comes to communications and conflict resolution...it teaches you to be open minded, because you might be representing something that disagrees with your own beliefs, but you have to learn how to represent and put those aside...It's very helpful and you see it be applied to students' day-to-day lives all the time."
