

Fall

With autumn came the start of a new school year. After an enjoyable and extensive summer vacation, the students eagerly returned to their beloved internment. They were greeted by the new athletic league, parties and dances, and of course, the perennial boredom of homework. But the students of Sycamore did not let the ennui of school weigh them down, and during the 85 Homecoming, they demonstrated their capacity for intense jubilation. The crisp and cool breezes of autumn heralded the joys and miseries of the fall athletic season. Some teams performed with utmost vigor and excellence, while others idled and sputtered. For Sycamore autumn was not the beginning of a drop toward a nadir of apathy in 1985, but a resplendent ascent toward a worthwhile and exciting 1986.
