

"AFTER CELEBRATING THE

end of the school year, a few friends piled into the bed of a pickup truck. All had been drinking that night, including the driver. The truck sped through a yellow light at the intersection of Fields-Ertel and Montgomery Roads. All four friends in the bed of the pickup truck were ejected. The driver survived, as well as three of the other friends. However, this one was killed instantly," a gravestone tells. The story was a true story that took place in Cincinnati. Officer Paul Payne and Ms. Kate Juenger, global language teacher, went through Payne's records on driving under the influence accidents to use this story for Grim Reaper Day.

"THIS YOUNG

person had just signed a letter of intent to play a sport for a major university. It was a dream come true. Upon returning home from the movies one Friday night, a drunk driver went left of center and struck this teen's car in a head-on collision. The young athlete died just days later of his injuries; however, the drunk driver walked away from the scene," said Officer Paul Payne as he announced to a class the death of a grim reaper. The grim reaper then was taken outside of the classroom to put on his black cloak. For the rest of that day the grim reaper was unable to speak. Payne continued his day addressing five classes each bell telling similar stories.
