Stopping the clock

"Excellence generally comes in small doses, and only a few people are lucky enough to spread it to every aspect of their lives."
Suzanne Wight, 11.

And making every second count. An incredible number of students are doing just that balancing academics, sports, volunteerism, sleep, jobs, and possibly social lives.

"Sometimes it's hard to juggle all of my activities, but I know in the long run it will pay off," said Lauren Truax, 10.

Stephen Vonderwish

These students make time stand still in order to pursue their multitude of interests.

Becoming involved is the competitive nature of college admissions, over achieving parents, or just the natural urge to be the best. Whatever the motivation, producing not only incredible results, it is creating incredible individuals. By Katie Loftspring
