THE GIRL WHO SAID NO

A death-like stillness cast a pall over the little group. A breathless suspense gripped each one, and a chokey feeling twined itself about their hearts. A ghostly pallor blanched their faces. To avoid the issue was inevitable.

The handsome brute with the black mustache wielded a glittering knife. He plunged it to the hilt in the prostrate form. The girl with the brilliant Oriental eyes and raven-hued hair fainted.

"Oh, no! No, no, no!" she murmured as she regained consciousness. "I cannot do it! You cannot make me do it!" she defied, sipping her aromatic spirits.

Ah, these women! Two weeks later she did it and without a shudder or a word. She sliced the ears from a cadaver with one hand and ate a sandwich from the other.
