THE Cincinnati Law School, now known as the College of Law, is now an integral part of the University of Cincinnati, not only by contract, but also by physical contact. For nearly a century our school had preserved an exclusiveness as to location apart from the campus until September of 1926 when we entered the new Alphonso Taft Hall, thus becoming a patent part of the University.

The coming of the College of Law on the Campus should be an important factor in the formation of a more perfect university, and thus a better community as it interweaves more firmly and closely the culture of the classics and the energy of the engineer with that staid dignity which marks the profession of Law.
