

Porter

Tower

The Season

FRIED, COOKED, EATEN, and put on ice for next year, the 1929 football season amounted to something like this . . . a rather dogged fight on the part of a young team against about five well-fed, well-kept, and well-trained young tornadoes from up-state, who probably came to Cincinnati expecting a little more than they got.

There is nothing to be gained by claiming a great amount of credit for the four straight victories the Bearcats chalked up in the beginning of the season. All said and done, the record against Buckeye competition amounted to four defeats, one tie, and no victories. There is much to be said in praise of the team's personnel; they seldom quit fighting, they trained under the usual disadvantage of the co-op system, and most of them were sophomores. Undoubtedly, many of them showed enough promise to warrant keeping them around the old camping ground for a few more years, but nothing can serve to make us admit that this or any other team we have had the good fortune to see on Carson Field is a representative Cincinnati team.

The Wittenberg and Miami games deserve commendation. We considered the team, the dope and the odds, and then when the old battle was on we were swept away by the style of fighting we saw a Cincinnati team display.

The work of two Bearcats was outstanding in every game in which they participated. Dost, of the fighting heart, was the same boy we have watched in other years, never willing to quit as long as he could crawl, and never lacking a word of encouragement for the others. Then there was Jimmy Peele, a player whose ability it was an unfailing joy to see. Bursiek played great defensive ball all year, and the latter part of the season flashed some bang-up offensive ball-toting that bodes no good for the opposition next year.

LETTERMEN

Paul Barclow
Ernest Barney
Harold Bohl
Ralph Bursiek

William Climer
Frank Dost
Clifford Goldmeyer
Arthur Hallett

William Harrison
Lawrence Kinsey
Lester Lakamp
Med Lutnerding

Robert Mills
James Peele
Clarence Sidingier
Walter Sipple

Sig Starick
Fred Waldman
Fred Tower, Mgr.
Harry Porter, Mgr.

