

1930

The R.O.T.C. Cadet

THE CADET is a potential leader in the reserve army of the nation, just as any other college man is the potential leader in the world of modern business. Upon completion of his course he is commissioned a reserve officer and assigned to the skeleton army which the National Defense Act has created. This army in the time of a major emergency will be filled in with reserves from our civilian population. These men must undergo an intensive training, and there is where it becomes the duty of the reserve officer to train this army and lead it in defense of the country.

As it is often said, a military training is of inestimable worth to every young man—while developing him physically, it at the same time instructs him in the principles of group co-ordination, respect for authority, and develops individual responsibility.

