

1930

It's too bad that spring and exams come at just about the same time. This group of students, as anyone can see, is giving serious consideration to both. The quivering figure supporting the weighty form of Morton Brown is none other than William Ammerman, founder of his own honorary. It's the surest way to make one, Bill.

Then you have Coach Rice's hopefuls, who begin swinging the hickory at the old horsehide 'round about this time. The grounder Hap Bohl is stooping to catch bounded off the stadium wall just as the picture was snapped. Then the minors claimed him.

Below is a scene on the varsity courts.
