REALIZING that one of the greatest problems facing the out-of-town student is proper living quarters, The Fenwick purchased a beautiful homestead at Clifton and Bryant Avenues, and converted it into a Club, in order that students attending the University of Cincinnati may have a home-like atmosphere under Fenwick influence. It is located within a six-minute walk of the University, in one of the most attractive neighborhoods of Cincinnati. The lounging, dining and study rooms are well equipped to take care of the comforts of the members. There is a regulation dormitory, and for those who care for privacy, there are single and double rooms—in fact everything for the convenience of the students' comfort. Throughout the year numerous social affairs have a prominent place in the life at the Branch.
