THE GREAT OLD GAME, whose Asian origin is said to have been 600 B.C., still challenges the intelligence, foresight, resourcefulness and sportsmanship of the modern American. To study the theory and practice of chess is to develop these characteristics, and for that reason the universities all over the United States are giving hearty encouragement to clubs organized to engage in intercollegiate chess competition.

Varsity Chess Club boasts of one of the strongest four-man teams between the Atlantic and the Pacific. Captain Theimer, Teegarden, Baxter and Koch form the nucleus of Cincinnati's squad, and for the past four years have been undefeated in match play. Such teams as those of Princeton University, The University of Mexico, Ohio State, Miami, are among its victims. The strong City Chess Club fell defeated before the U. C. group.

Varsity was host to the All-Ohio Intercollegiate Chess Championship tournament May 9 and 10 in the new Y building. Ohio State, Miami, St. Xavier, Hebrew Union, and Kenyon were among the visitors. Four loving cups were awarded the team champions and the individual honor players.

Present members of the club recently became charter members of Gamma Chapter of Beta Pi, national honorary chess fraternity. Participation in at least one collegiate match is a prerequisite to initiation.
