

HERE IS FREDERICK. He made the gosh-awful mistake of coming to school to get an education. It didn't take long to reform him, although he still wears striped B.V.D.'s. I.X.E. says they've put up with worse.

Maybelle was once young and innocent, but now she knows better. To prove the weight of her eighteen odd summers, she never parts her lips when she smiles, so her eyes become dark pools of mystery. They say that she is good-looking—if you see her face.

Inez is the activity girl, and the last prayer of Alpha Chi Omega. She never bothers with men because she has more important things to do. She is on every committee that has been started in the Liberal Arts college, because no chairman is going to risk poison in his coffee. The graduating class is thinking of donating a pillar to help support the school when she is gone.

Herman is an engineer, and still hasn't chosen between suicide and murder. A big and brawny man is he, with arms like iron bands from swinging a pick on Vine Street. He will break down and date any woman who has her own car, plenty of giggle-water, and the price of a movie. It's on account of him that the book-store started changing its discount system, because the clerk got nervous when Herman asked for stamps.

Gilda, Delta Zeta, attends the Applied Hearts college, where it is rumored that a girl can get by without overworking herself. Thornell has done her architecture, Driscoll turned in her design, Alan Walsh has managed all her themes, and she figures that if she can get something on one of the professors to blackmail him, she might get through yet.

Estelle is just naturally athletic. When she swings her arms, her sleeves break at the elbow and all the weather vanes turn the other way. Estelle can run faster when she sees a man than any other girl in school. The Alpha Gam's still can't get over how lucky they were to get her.

Kenneth is the most important man of the football team, and so has the welfare of his Alma Mater at heart that he is considering flunking out so he can help the team another year. It is mainly through his effort that the team has won so many moral victories. He really can't help it if the women insist on worshipping him. He once confided to a News reporter in a moment of weakness that the reason the football team ain't no good is because some of them ain't us Sig Alphas.

Bill is editor of the News. What Bill? Oh, What's the difference? All good editors are Lambda Chi's named Bill. For example the dynasty of Neiman, Hammond, Leach, Fetick, and Horstman. "We pick our boys according to ability," the News editor was credited with saying. "If it swims we have it." The activities and alumni of Lambda Chi Alpha still turn a sickly green when someone mentions the rumor that the News might be banned.

Oswald isn't quite sure why he wasn't president of the Senior Class unless it's because he's a Beta. However, he wants it understood that it wasn't his fault, as he did not know better at the time. Oswald will get you any job from chief can-opener in the Commons to President of the whole darned university if you vote for him. If he stays at school long enough, and the profs hold out, he may have a good chance yet.

Penelope is the school's best-dressed woman. She modestly admits that she is always twenty-four hours ahead of Paris (Kentucky). She is red when the rest of the world is white, and when femininity in general turns red, she develops an acute case of sunburn. Penelope has ten hats for any dress, and can name whatever color you are thinking about before you can count ten. She is the Theta's best drawing card.
