

IN KEEPING WITH THE POLICY of the Cincinnati to be of interest to all groups, we publish herewith the whereabouts of some of the alumni of recent years.

Kenneth Gould and his wife and child are in Washington, mingling with Capitol society—anyway they are in Washington.

There are current rumors of the engagement of Jane Deserisy and one of our prominent athletes. It is to be hoped that this will be the last.

Tom Clifton is not an alumni, but he should be.

As for the Chi-Omega-Lambda Chi alliance—it was cemented more tightly last fall when Betty Sykes roped in one of the brethren.

And then there is the case of Kay Montgomery—not to be daunted by her sister, she finally got Norman Auburn to swallow hook, line and sinker, and she is planning to become a housekeeper as well as an M.A. student next year.

Bill Taylor has at last found expression for his talents.

They say that Dick Farrell has acquired a house, lot, job and Packard car for life, incidentally annexing a wife.

Ginter and Wiggers, still in the wilds of Europe, as yet have been unsuccessful in finding any stray counts or dukes who are looking for attractive American girls. Anyhow, Ginter still likes Dick Franz.

Eleanor Heuck, not satisfied with having elevated the standards of the University while she was here, is now shedding her benign influence over the dear little children at Hull House, Chicago.

Al Mayer has turned school teacher. Heaven help the pupils!

Mary Bake has managed to take time off from her business to clean up campus politics somewhat.

Doctor Ben L. Bryant is at last really practicing medicine.

Mr. Charles Seymour Adams is president of the Mid-West Student Federation, but the estate still remains unsettled.

Mr. Mottern is telling the world why Crosley leads the field.

Miss McCue is telling the world why Mottern leads the field.

Mr. Humphries is practicing law.

Miss Sharkey is practicing.

Dorothy Lewis is receiving at one of Cincinnati's well-known dry goods emporiums.

Fritzi May is receiving.

The whereabouts of Mr. Fred Berger is quite a mystery.

It is understood that Evans Chatfield has returned to the hills of Kentucky.

Edie May Lammers is married (and isn't that a relief).

Mary T.'s first book, "How to be Happy Though Married," will soon be released.

Dot Carothers is introducing the new art to Pogue's.

Ed Levi, after living in high style for seven or eight years a la Musical Comedy, is now starving to death on the money he can make as a lawyer.

Ruth Thorp is not directing the World Peace Foundation yet.

In a few more years Betty Cook will graduate and then she will be entitled to space in this column.
