

ELIZABETH DYER, A.B.
Director of the School of Household Administration

Miss Elizabeth Dyer, Dean of the School of Household Administration, has finished her fifth successful year at U. C. Under her leadership and direction the school has taken a foremost place in the community. With her experience and background she has so ably managed the H. Ad. school that every year it has doubled its enrollment and correspondingly increased its many activities.

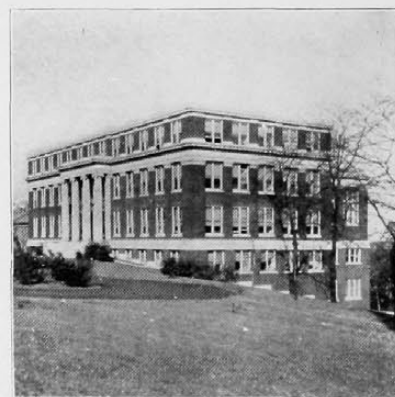

Miss Dyer came to the University having accumulated a wealth of experience as an administrator at the University of Pittsburg and at New York University. For a year she had made a survey of women's training schools, interesting herself particularly in the field of Home Economics. She had become convinced that a school specializing in this field offered more vocational opportunities for a girl than any other kind.

Through her initiative and leadership the school has worked with many civic agencies in improving living conditions and thereby removing ill health and delinquency. At the same time this activity makes it possible for the students of the school to come in direct contact with the problems and conditions about which they study in the classroom.

Outstanding among these projects is the co-operation of the Mothers' Pension Department of the Juvenile Court and the H. Ad. School in working out economic problems for certain families and thereby removing problems of conduct.

A well known woman in Child Welfare work said of these projects:

"... they are unique in the field of Mothers' Aid and are among the most constructive ventures that I know of in raising the standard of home life for this group of dependent children."
