

Compulsory Military Training Abolished

Coming as a distinct surprise was the announcement made public by the Board of Trustees of the University this winter regarding the abolishment of Compulsory military training for Freshmen Engineers. For the past ten years, in cooperation with the War Department, an R. O. T. C. unit, membership in which was compulsory for freshmen, has been in existence on the campus. Of late a steady attack has been directed against the compulsory feature of this organization, by many student organizations, alumni, and citizens of Cincinnati.

As a result of the trustees statement, Military training at the University will be offered to all those who desire it, but will be forced upon none. Engineers and Liberal Arts students alike, will be eligible for training, and credit will be given for the course, as before.
